10 Die, 19 Hurt When Train and Bus Collide at Iowa Crossing

Driver, Two Teachers
And Seven Students Victims

THREE NEAR DEATH

Two Witnesses Describe
Tragedy at Mason City

Mason City, Iowa — (AP) — Grief-stricken parents traced the bodies of their children to morgues and hospitals here today in the wake of a railroad official's armed, masked and most disastrous streamliner train accident in the history of midwestern railroading.

The glistering new Rocket, streamliner passenger train of the Rock Island railroad, plowed into a school bus loaded with 29 Renwick, Iowa, high school students on the outskirts of the city at 4 o'clock p. m. yesterday, killing 10 persons and injuring all the others.

The dead included the bus driver, two teachers and seven students, two of them girls.

The bodies of dead and injured were scattered 500 feet down the right-of-way as the wooden bus burst like a crushed watermelon under the impact.

The accident occurred at a private crossing inside the yards of the Mason City Brick and Tile company.

Made Tour of City
The students came here from Renwick early in the day on a tour of Mason City industries. They had visited one brick and tile plant and were on their way to another—the last visit before returning home—when the tragedy occurred.

George Simpson of Des Moines, Iowa, engineer of the sleek streamliner, said his train was traveling "between 20 and 25 miles an hour," "slowing up for a stop at the Mason City depot, only a mile away."

Three of the students were so seriously injured they may not survive.

Pauline Durrett, 15, safe at her home in Renwick, thanked the fate that kept her from taking the field trip with the rest of her class.

Searchers scoured the wreckage for Pauline's body last night, until notified by her parents she had decided, at the last minute, not to make the trip.

Vern Mott, Mason City coal dealer, who was in his automobile only 100 feet behind the bus, gave a graphic description of the accident.

"I heard the Rocket whistle and then I saw the streamliner coming from the south," he said.

"It didn't seem to be going so very fast. Vision was perfectly clear and I was utterly amazed when I saw the bus continue toward the crossing without slowing up."

Bodies Thrown Out
"The Rocket hit the bus squarely in the center and the big vehicle, of wooden construction, popped open as if it were a watermelon being dropped on the ground."

"Bodies hurled out of the bus, children screaming—it was the most horrible sight I've ever seen."

Another eye-witness was J. H. Leary, Minneapolis real estate man, who was on the streamliner, en route from Des Moines to Minneapolis.

"We were pulling into the city and going slowly," he said, "when the train suddenly stopped. Almost simultaneously I saw pieces of a truck flying through the air as I sat in my car, thrust out to the front of the Rocket and saw the chassis of the truck on the pilot."

"I counted seven bodies. Boys and girls were strewn all along the right-of-way. Some were moaning and groaning. One body was right across the rails; another was lying nearby with the head crushed in. Another was some distance away with a leg cut off by a wheel."

The fast, new streamliner had been in service less than a month between Kansas City and Minneapolis, maintaining a 9-hour and 20 minute schedule.

It is a three car stainless steel train of the latest design, powered

European Powers Again in Deadlock as Fascist Bloc Balks at Inquiry in Spain

London — (AP) — Europe's principal powers were arrayed today in a new deadlock over Spanish neutrality, particularly on the procedure of clearing foreign troops from the warring country.

The latest of almost countless impasses of this wrangle resulted from refusal of the fascist bloc—Italy, Germany and Portugal—to agree to be bound by figures on foreign soldiers to be tabulated by two proposed international commissions of inquiry in Spain.

The commissions would take a census of foreign soldiers and supervise their evacuation under the now threatened plan before the nine-nation subcommittee of the London non-intervention body.

Another problem was Soviet Russia's opposition to the granting of belligerent rights to the warring sides in Spain until all foreign fighters had been withdrawn.

Ivan Maisky, envoy of Russia which sympathizes with the Spanish republican government, heightened the tension in a bitter debate with Italy's ambassador to London, Count Dino Grandi, when the subcommittee met yesterday to put the finishing touches to the plan to restore non-intervention.

Only a proposal by British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, chairman of the sub-group, prevented what might have been a smashup of the negotiations.

He called for a recess until Monday, but today the next meeting of the subcommittee was postponed until Tuesday afternoon to give more time to try to obtain agreement from the governments involved.

Italy and Germany have avowed and defended their own pro-intervention in Spain, at the same time accusing Russia of actively helping the Valencia government.

Prepare Proposals
The wrangling committee, holding its sixty-seventh meeting, finally prepared a series of propositions for inclusion in a draft resolution setting out the principal points of discussion.

Practically the only thing the negotiators agreed upon was that the resolution should be presented to the nine governments represented.

The possibility of agreement next week seemed remote. It depended upon an expected move to drop the plan for "token" withdrawals and, instead, to work for immediate withdrawal of all foreign combatants.

Russia refused yesterday to agree because the withdrawal plan proposed that belligerent rights should be granted to the two sides in Spain.

Rush Troops to Two Loyalist Battle Fronts

Government Preparing for Assaults by Insur-

MINISTRIES ALERT

Awaiting Order to Quit
Valencia to Move
To Barcelona

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Border
— (AP) — The Spanish republican government was reported today to be rushing reinforcements to the Teruel and Aragon fronts to meet assaults of vastly strengthened insurgent forces against either Valencia or Catalonia.

Government ministries at Valencia, temporary capital, awaited an order to move to Barcelona, capital of autonomous but allied Catalonia, following affirmation of an accord between the two allied regimes.

While the insurgent chieftain, Francisco Franco, mopped up northwest Spain in a victory sweep that would liberate most of 100,000 soldiers for a tremendous drive at either the present or future capital of the republic, other developments added grim drama to the 15-month conflict.

Report Destroyer Sunk
Government sailors, taking refuge at Arabacosh, France, reported insurgent bombing planes sank the government destroyer Ciscar in Gijon harbor on Wednesday, the day before Gijon capitulated to the insurgents' seven week northwestern offensive.

None of the destroyer's crew was killed but several were wounded. Government sources estimated the Gijon, or Asturias, drive had cost Franco at least 30,000 men.

Premier Juan Negrin of the Valencia government, on a visit to Madrid, declared that "procrustean" European democracies had permitted Italy and Germany to gain all the time they needed to further their aims in Spain, "the wealth of which already has been mortgaged to them by the insurgents."

(The heads of both fascist governments have defended their intervention on the grounds they were meeting "a bolshevistic" inroad.

See Ultimate Victory
(Dr. Negrin professed an absolute faith in the ultimate victory of his government. He made a radio broadcast yesterday in Madrid, former capital of the republic. Accompanying him was President Luis Companys of Catalonia who confirmed reports of the impending shift of government from Valencia to Barcelona.

(Construction of 42 new bomb shelters was hastened in Madrid, which was the capital when the war broke out—now besieged for nearly

Heavy Casualty Lists for Both Sides in Battle

Japanese in Intensive Drive to Clear Way
To Nanking

BY LLOYD LEHRER
Shanghai — (AP) The great battle for Shanghai swayed madly back and forth in the moonlight tonight in a maze of small creeks and meandering canals north of Tazang, six miles northwest of Shanghai.

Both sides admitted severe losses as the Japanese fought desperately to smash the Chinese lines and open the way to Nanking. Just as desperately the Chinese battled to hold Tazang, loss of which would compel retreat from Chapei and Kiangnan, their strongholds on Shanghai's northern fringe.

Both sides tossed heavy reinforcements into the battle and each claimed success.

A Chinese army spokesman declared the Chinese had definitely checked the Japanese threat to Tazang after 70 hours of combat.

A Japanese spokesman asserted details did not matter, because the Japanese were slowly but surely pushing the Chinese back and gaining their general objectives.

The struggle surged through scores of thatched-roofed farm villages, from which terror-stricken persons fled, driving their oxen and pigs before them.

Military spokesmen admitted it was impossible to designate the ex-

K-C, Employee Work Contract Declared Void

Pulp, Paper Brotherhoods Charge Violations of Wagner Act

UNION TO DISBAND

Company and Labor Group Heads Agree to Cancellation

Neenah — Following two days of deliberation between union officials and officials of the Kimberly-Clark corporation, the general labor contract signed on Sept. 22, 1937, by the corporation and the Employees Independent Union was declared null and void yesterday, according to S. F. Shattuck, vice president of the corporation.

The 1-year contract would have continued present hourly wage scales and basic 36-hour week. The contract had been signed by members of the central committee which represents the six plants of the corporation. Officers of the union are Harold Fird, Kimberly, president; Mitchell Johnson of the Badger Globe, Neenah, vice president; Ames Green, Niagara, Wis., secretary; and George Rittin, Atlas Mill, Appleton, treasurer. The corporation recognized the union as the sole bargaining agent for all Kimberly-Clark mills.

Gives Reasons
Mr. Shattuck gave the following reasons for the action yesterday:

"During the period in which employees were organizing the independent union, certain technical provisions of the Wagner act were unintentionally violated. The former council plan, for instance, had not been entirely abandoned during the early stages of organization of the union. Under the council plan the company paid wages to employees while engaged in council business other than joint bargaining meetings with management."

"The company also paid, under the council plan, the traveling expenses and hotel bills of employee representatives. At the request of the employee section of the old council plan, the company also provided for a salary of the full-time secretary of the employee's section. Such practices are named as unfair under the Wagner act and, inasmuch as there was an overlapping between the outgoing council plan and the incoming independent union, the management of the corporation is charged with unfair labor practices and the independent union is labeled as 'company dominated.'"

Expressed Opinions
"In spite of mandatory instructions of the management to its more than 300 supervisors ordering them to maintain silence on all

Farm Plan May Mean Additional Federal Taxes

Two Sisters and Brother Captives
During Farm Raid

Roosevelt Says New Revenue
Needed if Costs Rise

WATCHING BUDGET

Airs Views in Letters to Congress Committee
tee Heads

Washington — (AP) — President Roosevelt notified congress today that new taxes should be levied to meet any increase in costs of federal farm control.

In identical letters to Chairman Smith (D-S. C.) and Chairman Jones (D-Texas) of the senate and house agriculture committees, now engaged in drafting farm legislation for the special session of congress convening next month, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"It is of course, especially important that any new legislation should not unbalance the expected balancing of the budget. In other words, no additional federal expenditures from the general fund of the treasury should be made over and above existing planned expenditures. The only exception to this would be the incurring of additional obligations on the part of the treasury, backed 100 per cent by additional receipts from new taxes."

"In other words, whatever goes out must be balanced by an equivalent amount coming in."

Wallace Plan Estimate
Some advisers to Secretary Wallace have estimated his ever-normal granary program would cost $700,000,000 annually, or $200,000,000 more than the half-billion now being spent on the soil conservation program.

Wallace has advocated a processing tax for financing cotton control and has said that other farmers are putting up a control plan on a self-sustaining basis.

Mr. Roosevelt's letter did not refer specifically to proposals for a corn crop loan which are being studied at the treasury and agriculture departments. Some on Capitol Hill presumed that in view of his letter, the chief executive also would expect congress to raise funds to meet the cost of such loans, if they are made.

The president's letter also urged that the present soil conservation program although "not entirely adequate to keep farm surpluses from wrecking prices and farm income" be retained as a part of the new program.

Warning in Letter
In making public the president's letter, Jones said, "I feel confident that legislation can be worked embodying these principles." He added he was "hopeful that we may have a bill ready for consideration in the early part of the session."

The president's letter warned against a repetition of the Republican farm board experiment with control soil surpluses.

"I wish to emphasize, especially," he said, "that any price stabilizing features, through loans or other devices, should be reinforced by effective provision against the piling up of unmanageable supplies. We must never again invite the collapse of farm prices, the stoppage of farm buying and the demoralization of the farmer."

The federal farm board's plan to maintain farm prices without control of farm surpluses.

Safeguard Incomes
In summarizing the features that he believed should be incorporated in new farm legislation at the special session, Mr. Roosevelt said, "The new national farm act should safeguard farmers' income as well as their soil fertility. It should provide for storage of reserve food supplies in an ever normal granary, so that if severe and widespread drought recurs consumers will be assured of more adequate supplies with less drastic increases in price than would otherwise be the case."

"It should provide for control of surpluses when and as necessary, but at the same time it should preserve the export markets that still are open to our farmers. It should protect both farmers and consumers against extreme ups and downs in the prices of farm products. It should be financed by sound fiscal methods. Local administration should be kept in the farmers' hands."

Railroad Executives
Ask Further Increases
Washington — (AP) — Executives of the nation's class one railroads, granted a $47,500,000 freight rate increase, indicated today they will ask the interstate commerce commission to approve a further increase of possibly ten times that amount.

Railway officials accepted the higher rates announced yesterday by the commission as only a fraction of what they need to meet higher operating costs.

Wage increases in recent months, the carriers contended, added $155,000,000 to their annual outlay, or three times the extra income approved by the I. C. C.

J. J. Foley, president of the Association of American Railroads, said the organization may file a petition for an additional rate increase next Thursday at Chicago.

Without additional increases, said President William M. Jeffers of the Union Pacific, the railroads may be "forced back into government operation."

Several policemen were seized by students, dragged into the university and manhandled. Students also attacked a group of pro-government members of the Wadsworth organization, but the students were dispersed.

Police patrolled Cairo streets wearing steel helmets. The government prohibited publication of reports of the disorders.

Roy Garr Freed In Shooting of General Denhardt

Crowd Applauds as Jury Brings in Verdict of Not Guilty

Shelbyville, Ky. (AP)—Roy Garr, who a month ago shot to death Brigadier General Henry H. Denhardt when they met on the main street of this little bluegrass town, went back to his bird dogs today, a free man.

A jury of 12 tobacco farmers acquitted him of a murder charge last night amid wild applause.

Jack Garr, 37, youngest of the three brothers indicted for the slaying of the man who once was tried for the fatal shooting of their sister, Mrs. Verna Garr Taylor, 40, was acquitted earlier on a directed verdict.

He was with Roy and Dr. E. S. Garr when Denhardt was shot, but was not armed.

The case of Dr. Garr, the oldest brother, was postponed to February. The jury which freed Roy, 46, La Grange, Ky., bird dog trainer and farmer, had before it commonwealth evidence that the 61-year-old Denhardt was shot in the back and defense testimony that Roy shot the general when the latter reached for his hip pocket.

Insanity Plea

The defense also presented expert testimony that Roy had been "temporarily insane."

Attorney General Hubert S. Meredith declared in his summation Denhardt had been slain to avenge the Garrs' sister.

State Senator Ralph Gilbert, of defense counsel, described Denhardt as a "mad dog" and asserted Roy "had a right to shoot a mad dog."

Denhardt was shot Sept. 20. His second trial was scheduled in nearby New Castle the following day.

The commonwealth, demanding the death penalty, contended the Garrs had heard Denhardt planned to present testimony that would reflect on their sister and came to Shelbyville to "get" the former adjutant general and lieutenant governor. The Garrs, however, testified the encounter was by chance.

Mrs. Taylor, a pretty brunet widow with two daughters, was shot to death Nov. 6, 1936, on a Henry county side road where the automobile in which she had been riding most of the day with Denhardt had stalled.

Denhardt said she killed herself over family objections to their proposed marriage.

R. A. VanAdestine Receives Award From Charles L. Hill

Manawa—A certificate of recognition for outstanding aid and interest in agricultural education was received by R. A. VanAdestine, town of Little Wolf farmer, this week from Charles L. Hill, chairman of the department of agriculture and markets of the state of Wisconsin. Mr. VanAdestine was one of 60 men throughout the state to be thus honored.

His selection was made by the local high school chapter of the Future Farmers of America chiefly because Mr. VanAdestine's efforts were largely instrumental in instituting a Smith-Hughes agricultural course in Manawa High school and in securing the present farm shop addition.

The award was made at the Wisconsin state fair in Milwaukee last fall, but the certificate was received here only this week. Other Waupaca county farmers to be honored were Frank Bowers of Marion, Arthur Smith of Waupaca, and Fred Buchholz of Weyauwega.

Mr. and Mrs. George Baker have leased the Central hotel in Manawa and have sold the liquor stock to Myron Myrick of Waupaca. Mr. Myrick will take possession the first part of next week. Mr. and Mrs.

by a huge red streamlined Diesel-electric engine.

Harry Guy Taylor, chairman of the Western Association of Railway Executives in Chicago, said:

"The Mason City accident was the worst of any in which a streamlined train figured. I don't think there has been more than one or two other fatal accidents with streamliners—and none in which train passengers are killed. A number of trucks and automobiles have been struck by the new trains."

The bodies of the dead were badly mangled, and identification was difficult. Groups of frenzied parents from Renwick rushed here by automobile, and with Renwick's school superintendent, M. K. Speery, made final identification of the dead and injured.

Engineer Simpson said his engine was not damaged mechanically and that no one in the train was even shaken. Many passengers did not know an accident had occurred until after the train came to a complete stop.

The Rocket proceeded on to Minneapolis after stopping to aid the injured and clear the right-of-way. Coroner J. E. McDonald of Cerro Gordo county said he probably would select a jury today and schedule an inquest for Monday so that the train crew might attend.

Much Conflicting Testimony Given In Federal Trial

Oil Conspiracy Case in Recess for Third Week-end at Madison

Madison (AP)—The third week-end recess in the federal government's gasoline price-fixing conspiracy case gave the court a chance today to mull over conflicting mental pictures painted by testimony drawn thus far from the prosecution's principal witness by attorneys of both sides.

Walter Paul Jacob, Tulsa, Okla., purchasing agent of the Socony-Vacuum and Wadsworth Oil companies, left the witness stand late yesterday after testifying since Monday afternoon.

Government prosecutors had predicted in their opening statements to the jury that the story of an alleged conspiracy to fix gasoline prices would be given "reluctantly" by Jacob and other witnesses.

Regarding Jacob's testimony, Federal Judge Patrick T. Stone said yesterday it was "very apparent that this witness is very hostile to the prosecution."

Describes Activities

Questioned by the government, Jacob spent his first three days on the stand telling of his work as "contact man" in a program in which he said 13 of the 23 oil companies on trial here bought "distress" or surplus, gasoline from small independent refiners in the mid-continent oil field.

He said he served on a three-man subcommittee which recommended increased prices to be paid by major companies, testified that his recommendations usually became "the market," and that these price quotations reflected these independent jobbers have testified they had to pay prices based on these quotations.

Cross-examination of Jacob by 11 defense attorneys presented the situation in a different light.

"Dancing Partners"

He said representatives of major companies who arranged the program and assigned small refineries as the majors "dancing partners" constituted a "tank car stabilization committee" started under the NIRA petroleum code. After an unusual hour-long informal debate among attorneys, Judge Stone ruled the defense might go into the subject of the code and written or implied government approval of the companies' actions as a basis for defense.

Jacob said the major companies bought only as much gasoline as they needed. Working with a chart of quotations in the Chicago Journal of Commerce and Platt's Oilgram, defendant trade publications, he testified he followed published quotations and that in his own purchases he "beat down" refiners to prices lower than his recommendations.

Questioned again by the government, Jacob said yesterday he changed his "hard-boiled" attitude in 1935. He testified he knew it was "important" to major companies for prices to rise and that he knew jobber prices throughout the mid-west depended upon published quotations.

Just before the court recessed until Monday, the government introduced a series of letters between Skelly Oil company officials making references to an "inter-refinery buying agreement."

Start Eight PWA Projects During Month in District

Two are in Winnebago County, Report of Director Shows

During the month of September, eight new projects, employing 138 WPA workers, were started in the Green Bay area, according to Mark Muth, WPA district director. Of these new projects, three are in Marinette county, two in Winnebago county, two in Shawano county, and one in Marinette county.

Work has started on the construction of water mains and sanitary sewer in a section of the village of Niagara, Marinette county, which has been without fire protection and sanitation facilities. The project involves construction of 2,300 linear feet of 6-inch water mains, 2,300 feet of sanitary sewer, and 8 brick manholes. An average of 15 men will be employed to complete the project within three and a half months.

Other new projects in Marinette county include grading, ditching and graveling 24 miles of secondary road in the town of Lake, and opening 54 miles of drainage ditch in the southeast section of the city of Marinette. The road project will employ 10 workers for approximately four months, and the drainage project in Marinette will require 40 workers for about two months.

Will Paint Bridges

In Winnebago county, WPA workers will clean and paint three bridges in the city of Oshkosh, and erect 150 enameled street signs in the city of Menasha. An average of 25 men will be employed for approximately three months on the bridge project, and 15 WPA workers will complete the street signs within two months.

New WPA projects started in Shawano county include construction of an ice house and hog barn at the county asylum, and construction of 1,727 linear feet of sanitary sewer in the village of Birmannwood. The new barn at the asylum is to be of frame construction, 24 by 68 feet.

The ice house will be of frame construction with a 16 by 20 foot concrete foundation. Construction of the new buildings will require the employment of 15 WPA workers for two and a half months, and 14 WPA workers will be employed on the sewer project in Birmannwood for approximately four and half months.

An average of 10 WPA workers will construct 2,850 square yards of concrete pavement on 6th street in the city of Kiel, Manitowish county. The new pavement will be completed within three months.

Expect More Beef And Lower Price For 1938 Market

Little Change in Pork Supplies Reported by Government Bureau

More grain-fed cattle will be coming to market next year than during this last year, the bureau of agricultural economics said today in current situation reports on beef cattle and hogs to R. C. Swanson, Outagamie county agricultural agent.

With larger supplies of grain on hand this winter, the number of cattle fed this winter and spring will be considerably larger than a year ago. Therefore, prices of the better grades are expected to decline more than the usual amount during the first half of next year.

Regarding the hog situation, the bureau said that supplies of hogs for slaughter during the 6-month period from October through March probably will be smaller than a year ago. On the other hand, it is expected that the demand for hog products for storage and consumer demand for meats in this period also will fall off somewhat. Accordingly, the bureau said that hog prices this fall and winter probably will average little, if any, higher than those of the same period a year ago.

The seasonal decline in hog prices now under way, however, probably will continue through the fall months, it was pointed out. Hogs will be fed to heavier weights this year than last because of the more plentiful supply of grain, and the greater part of last spring's crop of pigs probably will come to market somewhat later than usual.

Less Slaughtered

The number of hogs slaughtered under federal inspection during the entire marketing year, October 1937 through September 1938, is expected to be somewhat smaller than in 1936-37 when the total was 34.1 million head. The total live weight of hogs slaughtered, however, probably will be about the same as last year because of the increase in average weights.

Though more pigs will be raised next year than in 1937, the increase will not be reflected in increased slaughter until late 1938 and early 1939.

Speaking of the cattle market, the bureau noted that in late September prices reached the highest level on record for that month; top price at Chicago reached $19.90 a hundred pounds. Supplies of well finished, grain-fed cattle were short, accounting for the high prices.

Prices of the lower grades of slaughter cuts declined somewhat in September, with the usual increase in marketings of such cattle. Prices of nearly all kinds of cattle declined during the first half of October. The widespread between prices of the better grades and lower grades is expected to narrow considerably in the next few months.

The money, Mrs. Shannon said, was used principally for groceries, milk, shoes, medical attention and dental service locally. In addition a national program including first aid, home hygiene, life saving and production service was carried on by the chapter.

Last year only 2.95 per cent of the population of Outagamie county joined the Red Cross as compared with 11.40 per cent of the population of Lake Mills, 8.98 per cent for Beloit and 3.66 per cent for Manitowish.

Memberships will be sold for prices ranging from $1 up and will be accepted by the secretary at the local office. A canvass of industrial plants, business houses and residential sections will be made by the committee.

Fifteen WPA cancellations were made. There were 267 persons on the certified lists at the end of the month.

A. and P. Food Mart Sees End of Its Kind in Wisconsin

A self-service Atlantic and Pacific Food store, the second of its kind in the state, will open at 9 o'clock Monday morning at 234 E. College avenue.

J. P. Smith, general superintendent of the Wisconsin Atlantic and Pacific Food Stores, will be present for the opening. Harvey Younger is manager.

Customers entering the store will be provided with rubber tired carriages into which they place merchandise as they move from one section to another. Attendants at meat counters and others where goods must be weighed are the nearest approach to sales persons in the new store.

After customers have selected their purchases, the carriages are wheeled to checking counters near the front of the building. Model cash registers provide an itemized receipt of everything bought.

Merchandise is departmentalized, with large signs showing each department. All goods are clearly marked as to price and stacked on counters for effective display. Aisles are wide and clear of merchandise.

The building, 40 feet by 120 in size, in which the new A. and P. Food Mart is located has been completely remodeled. New lighting, ventilation, water and heating fixtures have been installed. The store has the latest equipment for the handling of fruits, vegetables and meats and new facilities for groceries. The basement has been made into a large store room.

Lay Cornerstone Of High School in Brief Ceremony

Seymour Gmeiner, School Board President, Sets Stone in Place

The cornerstone of Appleton's new high school was laid during a brief ceremony at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon before about 1,500 city and school officials, students and townspeople.

After talks by Mayor John Goodland, Jr., and Seymour Gmeiner, president of the school board, the large cement block bearing the inscription, "1937," and containing material to commemorate the occasion, was set in place by workmen. Mr. Gmeiner officiated at the ceremony.

In his address Mayor Goodland said, "It is a source of pride to me to stand here and see the fine buildings being erected. We are building another monument to our city's progress and another testimonial to the enterprise of the people of Appleton."

"This building is the end of a long civic struggle and now that the building is under way on this site, I think everyone is satisfied. When this building is completed and the grounds landscaped, we will have a school that will be magnificent and beautiful."

Community Monument

"When we cement this cornerstone into place today, we are cementing our people again into community unity. This building is an expansion of our civic enterprise and is the finest monument we could build to community pride. It is proof that we want to build in Appleton the finest type of young citizens possible to produce."

Mr. Gmeiner said that the time spent in argument over the site and the kind of school to be built was not wasted. He said if the school was built 10 years ago, the type of building now being constructed would not have been possible. Mr. Gmeiner thanked school officials, teachers, builders and members of the school board for their cooperation.

The high school student's angle on the new school and what it means to students was presented by Dexter Wolfe, a senior at the high school. He briefly outlined the benefits pupils would have in the new structure as compared with the old school.

Directory in Stone

Contained in the cornerstone was a copy of the Student Handbook, issued last month; a directory of the city of Appleton and one of the high school; a high school report card, a copy of "Patterns of Standards," a booklet containing creative writing by high school pupils.

An intramural pamphlet, a copy of "Futures," a 1937 Clarion, high school yearbook, several issues of the Talisman, high school newspaper, the 10-year report of the senior high school, three copies of the Appleton Post-Crescent, the history of the movement for the new high school, and a scale of wages paid for labor.

Officials taking part in the ceremony included Mayor Goodland; Mr. Gmeiner; H. H. Helbo, principal of the high school; John Wood, Anna K. Boyer and Dr. T. H. Heger, members of the board; Harry P. Hoefel, city attorney; and Aldermen Steinbauer, Kuzio and Harman.

Education Cost Is 47 Cents a Day for Each Appleton Pupil

During the 1935-36 school year, the city of Appleton spent 47 cents a day to educate each full time day school pupil attending public schools, the Washington office of education reports.

Only four major Wisconsin cities spent less than Appleton for day school education. Fond du Lac expenditures were $74.32 for each pupil or 41 cents per day; Sheboygan, $64.94 or 35 cents per day; Beloit $71.46 or 39 cents per day; and Stevens Point, $64.50 or 36 cents per day.

Milwaukee paid the greatest amount with the records showing $107.50 or 57 cents per day spent for education of each student. Green Bay's costs were $87.11 for each pupil or 48 cents per day and Kenosha spent $90.56 or 50 cents per day. Appleton's total costs per day for each pupil were $81.99, a boost of 2.7 per cent over the previous year.

Welfare Drive to Be Held Next Week

Scouts Will Canvass City; Collections on Saturday

The annual drive for clothes, household goods and other usable materials for the community store-room will open next week under the auspices of the Appleton Relief and Welfare association.

Boy Scouts again will act as workers in the drive which will end with the actual collections of donations at homes next Saturday, Oct. 30.

The need for clothes is particularly urgent this year because on Oct. 1 the federal government stopped furnishing materials for WPA sewing projects and now confines its help to the payrolls. Many of the clothes collected during the drive in the city will be made over into new garments.

The scouts will start contacting homes throughout the city Monday and requesting citizens to make their donations ready for Saturday's collection by city trucks. When people are not at home, the scouts will leave cards hanging on the doorknobs giving the phone number of the Boy Scout office, 1583, and asking citizens to call there if they have any donations.

Other Poisonings to be Aired in Hahn Trial; Weekend Recess Taken

Cincinnati — (AP) — Circumstances under which three lonely old German-Americans sickened and died after varying periods of acquaintance with the Bavarian blonde Anna Marie Hahn lay spread upon common pleas court records today as a weekend recess was taken in the woman's trial for murder.

Evidence of deaths other than that of Jacob Wagner, 78, with which she is charged, was permitted on the prosecution's contention that they were links in a scheme of poisonings to permit raiding the victims' modest estates.

Immediately upon Judge Charles S. Bell's admission of such testimony, Prosecutor Dudley M. Outcall called a series of witnesses from Denver and Colorado Springs, Colo., to tell of events leading up to the death of George Obendorfer, 67, last Aug. 1.

At a night session he then launched into testimony on the death of 72-year-old Albert Palmer last March 24.

There the case was halted temporarily when Judge Bell announced there would be no Saturday sessions because Chief Defense Counsel Joseph H. Hoodin was suffering from a cold.

Hotel Men Testify
In speedy sequence, Louis Straub and Pell P. Turner, Denver and Colorado Springs hotel men, respectively, testified that Mrs. Hahn brought her 12-year-old son, Oscar, and Obendorfer to their hotels, signing for the entire party.

Turner said that at his insistence Mrs. Hahn took Obendorfer to a hospital where he died. He said she denied knowing him, declaring she had merely met him on the train. However, a Cincinnati cab driver, Otto Walke, said he drove the trio act position of the front lines. Possession of a dozen specks on the map was in dispute.

This correspondent crawled through the British defense lines on the northern edge of the International Settlement tonight into disputed Chapei and found that the Chinese had made slight gains in bitter street fighting in spite of a terrific rain of Japanese shells and bombs.

The Chinese had advanced along North Kiangsi road until opposing forces faced each other along range road behind sandbags only 30 yards apart.

Chinese troops were shifted from Tazang, where Japanese were trying to cut off Chinese communications about five miles northwest of the International Settlement, to Kwangtu, well to the rear of the Chinese 25-mile front.

Nanzhang Is Objective
At Kwangtu heavy Japanese forces apparently were attempting to smash the Chinese lines to capture Nanzhang, China's powerful "winter line."

Japanese troops were reported to have reached within four miles of Kwangtu. The Chinese army spokesman declared, however, that barbed wire entanglements along the Cincinnati union terminal at the start of the trip.

Dr. Frances McConnell, attractive brunet toxicologist from Denver, testified Obendorfer's viscera contained poison and that a table salt shaker found in his grip contained an identical lethal mixture.

Outcall promised eventually to show that Mrs. Hahn had access to the grip.

Dykstra to Talk At Noon Meeting

Chamber of Commerce, Three Clubs to Hear U. W. President

The city's three service clubs, Rotary, Lions and Kiwanis, will suspend their regular meetings next week to attend a noon luncheon Wednesday at Conway hotel at which Dr. Clarence Dykstra, president of the University of Wisconsin, will talk.

"The City Faces the Future" will be the subject of the university president's address before members of the three clubs and the Chamber of Commerce. A forum committee from the Chamber of Commerce headed by Dr. Carl Neidhoff has planned the luncheon. Formerly city manager of Cincinnati, Dr. Dykstra is recognized as one of the nation's leading authorities on municipal administration. He will address a gathering of Wisconsin alumni on educational subjects here that same evening.

creaks and irrigation ditches were impenetrable and that Nanzhang was not believed in danger. Chinese authorities reported Japanese casualties on the Shanghai front have totaled 65,000, including 24,200 killed. About 5,000 wounded Japanese, they declared, have been transferred to Daijen, Kwangtung leased territory, rather than to Japan.

Japs Near Tazang
The Chinese spokesman conceded that the Japanese forces were within one and one-quarter miles of Tazang, where a Japanese victory could cut off Chinese in the important Chapei sector and open a path toward Nanking, China's capital. The possibility that the town might fall, however, still was considered remote, he declared.

Death and destruction virtually encircled Shanghai as both forces intensified their attacks and bombardments from land, sea and air both in the Tazang sector and at Kwangtu, an important point on the route to Nanking, well in the rear of the Chinese 25-mile defense line.

Both sides utilized every possible weapon. Observers predicted that the changing war map would remain a jumble of confusing counter-claims for days with both armies launching attacks and counter-attacks, losing and regaining villages.

Observers were barred from the bloody scene for a distance ten miles outside Shanghai.

The city itself endured five Chinese air raids before today's foggy dawn and was within earshot and sight of the infantry battle.

Missionary Work Will be Topic of Catholic Sermons

Appleton Parishes to Join In Observance of Mission Sunday

Sermons in all Catholic churches in Appleton tomorrow will be devoted to missionary topics, in response to a letter from the Rev. ## Margaret Drennan Seeks Seclusion After Acquittal

Wants to 'Get Away' From Little Town Where She Shot Reeves

Iselin, N. J. — (AP) — Dark-haired Margaret Drennan, acquitted by a jury, smiled wanly today as she spoke of her one wish — to "get away" for a rest from this little town where on a night six weeks ago she shot to death Paul Reeves, young father of two children.

Sitting in the warmth of her one-story home and surrounded by her family to whom she returned after weeks in jail and five days on trial for murder, the 20-year-old secretarial student declared she planned to pass "a couple of days" here first and then take a trip.

"I want to get away," said the "lady in red."

"I'm going to rest up. I need it," she added. But none of her plans is definite.

"Oh, I don't know," she replied to most questions in the same low, soft voice she used when she told her story on the witness stand.

She said she still wanted to continue the secretarial work that was interrupted by the tragedy Sept. 7 when, she told a jury of 11 men and a woman, she shot Reeves because he attacked her a second time.

Disappoints Crowd
Margaret disappointed a crowd that had cheered the acquittal verdict and had waited outside the Middlesex county jail at New Brunswick for a glimpse of her. A half hour after the girl had left for her home with her mother and father the crowd called for her at the jail entrance.

Margaret said she still hoped to become a lawyer some day, a hope which her mother said was forestalled by lack of money. Her father, John Drennan, works as a metal lather in New York to support his five children.

The trial behind her, Margaret was able to laugh her agreement when it was suggested she had had a preliminary education in legal procedure.

A desolate picture of her future was painted for the jury in the summation of one of her attorneys, George L. Burton.

"She can't go back to Iselin and make that her home," the lawyer said. "She's got to break away from her family. In a few months she will have a child."

A guest speaker, Meredith Plunkett, Milwaukee, will be in charge of the evangelistic service at the Appleton tabernacle at 7:45 Sunday evening. a year. With the new refugees for 23,000 persons, Madrid will be able to shelter 355,000 of her 1,000,000 population.

(An advance party of Valencia officials moved yesterday to Barcelona where the government had requisitioned more than 2,500 buildings to house its ministries. More than 2,000 troops and 1,500 assault guards accompanied the party to Barcelona.)

The remnants of the Asturian defenders of Gijon were said by Franco's daily communique to have been isolated on a narrow promontory, Cabo de Penas, near Gijon.

Government field bulletins admitted the fall of the Basconyan stronghold at a time when other Asturians were surrendering by the thousands with their arms.

Seize War Supplies
Insurgent commanders said they seized enormous quantities of war materials, including 14 pieces of artillery. This material, with a large amount of insurgent planes and other mechanical equipment, was expected soon to be used on other Spanish fronts.

Dispatches reaching the French border said thousands upon thousands of Asturian militiamen were straggling along the roads to Gijon to offer allegiance to Franco's new base in the northwest.

Many who had fled to the hills when Gijon fell Thursday had changed their minds and decided to return. They caught rides on Franco's field trucks taking food to Asturian ports.

The way of the trucks was a hard one. Roads in all directions from Gijon were said to have been wrecked by the retreating Asturians. The winding highway west of Gijon from Villavieja had been dynamited every 200 yards. Trees had been felled across the highways and culverts demolished.

Dispatches from Gijon said the city was "entirely calm." Residents who had hung bed sheets out of windows as a signal of capitulation had replaced them with makeshift banners in the insurgent red and gold.

Street cars were running and stores were open. Among the first orders given by Franco's aide, General Solchaga, after the occupation was one for speedy arrival of food trucks.

Park Board Asks for $20,400 in Estimate
The park board today filed an estimated budget of $20,400 at the city clerk's office for operation and improvement of city parks in 1938.

Included in the budget is a specific request for $2,400 to construct a wading pool in Telulah park. Last year the council allowed $16,500 in its budget for operation of the parks. The $1,500 boost in the board's request is to take care of an increase in wages, unemployment insurance and other increased costs.

Highway Committee to Discuss 1938 Budget
The county highway committee will discuss the 1938 budget Monday at the courthouse. The budget will be brought before the county board at its November session. Bills will be allowed and other routine business transacted.

"King of Kings" Is Showing Here

Famous Picture at Chapel Tonight and Tomorrow Night

Cecil B. De Mille's production of "The King of Kings" in which 18 players of extraordinary ability and thousands of extras appear, will be shown at the Lawrence Memorial chapel at 7:30 tonight and 6:30 tomorrow night. The Geneva committee of Lawrence college is sponsoring the show.

Portraying the life of Christ, this film enlisted the energies of the De Mille organization for a year. For the first time in motion picture history, a producer re-created the temple at Jerusalem, the palace of Herod and many other famous Biblical buildings and scenes. More than 10,000 objects or properties pertaining to the early Christian era were made for the picture.

H. B. Warner has the role of Jesus and Jacqueline Logan takes the part of Magdalene. The cast is said to be one of the most imposing ever to appear in a motion picture production.

Roosevelt's Son Proving to be Able Assistant

Appointment Sensible Solution to Overwork Problem, Lawrence Says

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Washington—They used to have an expression, "tell it to Sweeney," but there's an improvement on that slogan now in White House circles, where they say, "Tell it to James."

Lawrence

The designation of James Roosevelt as the official receiver of information from the 18 agencies of the government ought, however, not to be considered lightly. It represents a move that was a long time coming and one which may have a profound effect on the remaining years of the Roosevelt administration.

Ever since the days of the late Louis Howe, the question of liaison between Mr. Roosevelt and the outside world has been a difficult one to understand. First, the president tried out the idea of an executive coordinator—Frank Walker—and then later he appointed Donald Richberg. The plan didn't work. It was hard to get the cabinet officers to do business with Mr. Roosevelt through an intermediary.

But the task of the presidency is a colossal one. No human being can possibly see all the persons who want to see a chief executive, persons inside his own administration, and get anything else done, much less see anybody from the outside world. And it isn't a question always of a personal interview, but of attention for an urgent memorandum—or at least one that the head of some government agency thinks is urgent.

Mr. Roosevelt has been flanked by an able group of secretaries, each skilled in his own line. Thus, Marvin McIntyre handles the appointments very well and Stephen Early does a splendid job of dealing with the press. There has been nobody, however, except the Tom Corcorans and the others of the brain trust to take up specific problems and dig into them for the president. The request made by Mr. Roosevelt in the executive reorganization bill for six assistants with a "passion for anonymity" was treated with some humor by the critics, but the truth is Mr. Roosevelt and every president needs some able young men to sift out the mass of valuable data which people want him to have.

Solution of Problem
Entrusting to James Roosevelt the work of meeting with the heads of 18 different agencies of the government once a week was a sensible solution of the president's problem of overwork. The son has the implicit confidence of his father and has a very good understanding of current problems.

For several months it has been reported that James Roosevelt would some day run for the senate from Massachusetts or for the governorship. He makes the Bay state his legal residence and recently bought a farm there. Undoubtedly young Roosevelt has a political future. He makes a good speech and inherits his father's ability to make friends and to mix well with the people generally.

The president is, of course, giving his son a remarkable opportunity to see government from the inside and it ought to stand him in good stead some day when he enters the political arena for himself. But meanwhile the president is getting a very able assistant to get at the bottom of the many conflicts and collisions that occur in government departments and bureaus.

Jimmy Roosevelt is said to be a good listener. This is an excellent trait in a presidential assistant. The other day, he was in New York, talking to some of the business men about current problems and is said to have made an excellent impression. He was spoken of as level-headed and keen in his understanding of some of the things that are bothering the business and financial community in the effort to get the recovery movement started forward once more.

While the president may be criticized by some for putting his son into public office, Mr. Roosevelt must be permitted not to discriminate against his own son when he happens to be capable and exceedingly useful to him. Many of us may disagree with the Roosevelt policies, but this is no reason for begrudging the president all the human help he needs in handling his enormous job with its unprecedented responsibilities.

City Council May Abandon Plan to Build Fieldhouse

Athletic Field Seen as Possible Alternate Proposal

New London—Abandonment of the fieldhouse project at Hatten Memorial park for a substitute project will be considered at a special meeting of the common council, the Hatten Fund trustees and the city park board at the council chambers at 7:30 Monday evening. It was announced yesterday by Mayor E. W. Wendlandt.

The responsible groups have been skeptical from the first of the practical utility of the fieldhouse building and weighed all angles carefully before ordering the plans and estimates for the structure. Plans were completed this week by R. M. Connelley, city engineer.

An effort will be made Monday evening to analyze public opinion on the matter and determine the possibility of using the funds for other project purposes. The $10,000 fund cannot be used for any other purpose except on the approval of the trustees.

Mayor Wendlandt indicated yesterday that the construction of a regulation athletic field at the present park would be strongly considered. A telephone conference with the WPA district office this week revealed the city might receive WPA aid on such a project. A larger regulation field a grandstand and enclosure of native stone are suggested for the prospective project.

Mystery Comedy Is Set for Oct. 28

Manawa Students to Present 'Murdered Alive' In Gymnasium

Manawa—"Murdered Alive," a three-act mystery comedy, will be presented by Manawa High school students in the gymnasium on Thursday evening, Oct. 28. The scene is the living room of the lonely house of Hillcrest which belongs to the late Marvin Ryder. Otis Marvin, a lawyer, played by Bruce Brown, has called the relatives of Marvin Ryder to this house for the reading of the will.

Mrs. Libby Ryder, a society matron (Lois Bauer), and her daughter, Arden Ryder (Helen Fenske), are the first to arrive in this dismal place. Tillie Meek, the maid of the late Marvin Ryder, played by Ruth O'Donnell, is also nervously awaiting news of her inheritance. Unexpected relatives, Stella Backus (Lorna Draeger) and her much hen-pecked husband, Frank (Floyd Esche), upset the inheritance expectations of Mrs. Ryder.

One paragraph of the will and the mysterious appearance of Iris Alda (Eunice Fenske), who sets messages from the dead, complicate the plot, which is not solved by the appearance of Warner Melton (Lyle Ferz) and Luverne Speed (Marilyn Kitzmann). A correspondence school detective, Acton Chance (Clarence Draeger), adds much humor to the play in trying to untangle the mystery. Arline Evans (Florence Plotter) and a Mysterious Stranger (Arthur Sturm) finally combine to make apparent the correct solution.

GREAT MEN MAKE A GREAT STATE

In its follow-up of warm criticism against the LaFollette administration at Madison, the Capital Times denounces the recent reorganization measure passed by the legislature because it "gives the governor authority to order drastic alterations in the present structure of government" and deplores the trend of the times in that "Never in the state's history have such broad, sweeping powers been granted to a governor."

Continuing in its discussion the critic claims that the LaFollette administration "has placed too much importance on the machinery of government instead of the personnel of government" with the candid shot that "State government in Wisconsin in recent years has been suffering more from dryrot personnel than from lack of adequate machinery." If the Badgerite is able to momentarily cut all of his personal political ties he will likely find himself in strong agreement with this declaration from the Capital Times, the pith of which has been declared time without end by other sources:

"No, we don't need more machinery and more commissions and more jobs. We do need more men in office whose ability, standards and ideals are of the highest degree. No matter how efficient and well conceived the piece of administrative machinery, it can be abused and wrecked by personnel whose conception of the state's service is along selfish, spoils system lines, rather than a conscientious handling of the public's business."

In the quoted paragraph the Times has so correctly stated a great principle that nothing to be found in the political calendar of disagreements between man should stand in the way of its hearty approval and commendation.

We expect that when a Progressive is governor he will make appointments largely from his supporters. The same of course, holds true with other parties.

Accepting that usage never justifies the appointment of political soldiers of fortune, of the slick and oily hanger-on who has leaped "with well chosen words" into the center of the picture and by his stance, plus some voluble flattery directed toward the chief, created the impression that he could actually work or do more with a desk than put his feet upon it.

The party in power is in honor bound to put its men of talent in positions where talent is well-nigh indispensable if we are to get from government what it is possible for intelligent government to give.

To point only to Wisconsin history plenty of evidence in support of this really undeniable proposition may be found in the last forty years. We have had some excellent administrations in that time. And we have had some rank ones.

When we have had governors who put talent first on their list you could almost see the great machinery of state leap forward.

Strong men in positions upon the Public Service Commission or the Tax Commission, just to use these two as examples, make their influence and value felt for generations to come. This is because such men not only fairly, capably, and with character, perform the daily functions of their office but with foresightfulness are able to reasonably well chart future problems and their solutions. Such men are constantly meeting difficulties that are bound to come in advance of their occurrence.

And thus we are prepared to say that Wisconsin's rule of its public utilities and conduct of its Tax Commission far surpasses similar important tribunals elsewhere in the union.

Yet in truth the reason for Wisconsin's enviable position in this regard is to be traced directly to the governors who put on great men—truly great men—in the several decades just past.

One could follow this proposition and demonstrate it by names and dates and occurrences beyond the chance for anyone to dispute it. And this is made simpler, because we ran into machine governors who thought that democracy meant that a good story teller with a pleasant countenance would be just as good on public utility rates as a keen minded auditor with a full grasp of the problems and purposes involved.

Not until these wretched appointments were made did the people begin to appreciate the splendid administrators they had had. Under the rule of the hand-shakers government deteriorated, and annoyances and disgruntlement increased perceptibly. For, of course, it is the wretched appointments that make the stars shine all the brighter.

GULLIBLE GRIDDERS

An estimated 55,000 people witnessed last Saturday's football spectacle between Minnesota and Michigan at Ann Arbor. This meant a gross income of about $100,000 for the two universities participating. Even deducting such expenses as stadium upkeep, and team expenses, and splitting the balance, it meant a sizeable nugget for both Michigan and Minnesota. But out of this $100,000 how much was paid the 30-odd youths who put on the show that concentrated all those people there?

The answer is not one cent. Just so the problem of so-called amateurism in college football has an obvious answer. But in the seats of higher learning of our great country, where intellectual truths are faced straightforwardly and honestly, where the problems of the universe are probed to their elemental roots, an obvious answer obviously is shunned. Instead of paying football players openly for their services, colleges and universities have devised subtle undercover methods of rewarding them and incidentally attracting them to the particular schools. It is above their intellectual level, apparently, to pay wages; they must offer bribes.

At one school the alumni are the go-betweens, sometimes contributing to an athlete's education out of their own pockets, sometimes getting a rebate from the school for such a sacrifice. In another university the crack athletes are given bogus jobs at high wages, for which they do little real work. Another place the star players are slipped a block of tickets to the big games which they can dispose of as they see fit. Or most commonly a fake scholarship is arranged.

Though all colleges and universities in the country cry out "for shame" at such charges, it is generally known that at least 90 per cent of them are guilty. They may be a few innocents but they are hard to find.

The charge now must either be admitted with the comment, "what of it?" or it must be answered by constructive action.

What is that answer? Perfectly simple, it is for colleges and universities to pay their players outright, not any outlandish sum, but enough to assure football players a healthy living while they go through college, spending much time and effort, taking many risks, so that the college can rake off thousands of dollars in gate receipts each week in the fall. Say $600 a year, which would be sufficient to educate most students.

Playing eight game schedules, this would be a cost of $75 per game per player. Going back to the Minnesota-Michigan game, each school, even considering that it was paying perhaps 30 players on its squad, would have an additional expense of only $2,250 for that game. $4,500 for both of them, as compared to $100,000 received at the gate. Would that be too great a percentage to pay the fellows who are actually responsible for the total income?

It seems a grave commentary to make on the great American institutions of higher learning that young men who go to college supposedly to attain ideals of good citizenship, intellectual honesty and moral stability get timely lessons in underhandedness, bribery and trickery as soon as they step on the football field.

College football has replaced Prohibition as the great American hypocrisy. The solution doesn't lie, however, in abolishing football. It's just a matter of facing the truth and handling the problem with candor.

THE STORMY FATHER COUGHLIN

Something on the order of a widespread movement has been instituted to relieve Father Coughlin from the restraint of what is termed "ecclesiastical censorship."

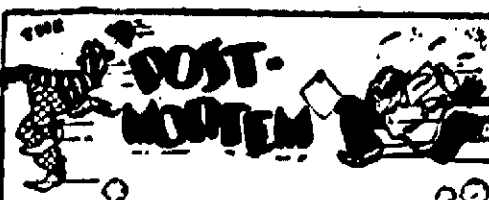

It cannot be that those engaged in this publicized campaign of publicity have really muffed the ball. There could not be that much butter to put on fingers. Smoke screens are wonderful affairs when created to conceal navies from attack. But they are used so generously in our political life to hide the truth that a halt might well be called upon them if for no other purpose than maintaining the self-respect of the American people.

Father Coughlin is a hothead. If a cleric must go into politics it should be the one who can hold his temper, for a political life requires great patience as well as great toleration.

If "ecclesiastical censorship" means that clerics must not wallow in the gutter it is an expression long to be remembered and much to be praised.

The President's appointment of the Birmingham police justice to the supreme court provoked shame upon the part of millions and resentment upon the part of millions more. But the situation was not improved by Father Coughlin's declaration that that appointment was mere proof of the President's "personal stupidity." It may be said in just commendation of the great majority in this country who were more than disgusted at this disgraceful appointment that they did not stoop to personal abuse of the President. If a cleric simply must throw all restraint to the winds he should be considerate enough of the many well poised men of the cloth to take off his collar too and throw that to the same winds.

Then he can call anyone anything he likes, remaining amenable only to the court that deals with misdemeanors.

I AM NOT SURE whether the office is cold Friday morning as I punch this out, or whether it is that I have just read a Chicago newspaper story on how the terrible Pittsburghs are waiting gleefully to annihilate the smaller, less experienced and presumably less paid Wisconsin. . . . at any rate, I am affected by a definite chill and I do not know whether to blame it on the newspaper story or on the fact that a fresh air fiend has opened a window that has no business being open on a morning like this. . . . all in all it is a very chilly, gray morning, and I am in no mood to hear how the terrible Pittsburghs are going to annihilate the Wisconsin. . . . maybe it is just newspaper talk that I am taking seriously. . . . maybe there is something in the fact that the Pittsburghs have to push the ball 700 yards to make 7 points. . . . this gives me a little hope because the Iowas pushed the ball a long way last week with the same methods that the terrible Pittsburghs use, and they did not win the game. . . . however the Iowas are not the terrible Pittsburghs and I am probably whistling in the dark. . . . also cold. . . . and it makes me very upset to be cold. . . .

MARY ANN

Mary Ann is only two. She has a baby sister — Sue — And though the baby is quite small, Mary doesn't care at all.

She'd like to push The buggy 'round. And lift the baby up and down, Or try to!

And most of all she'd like to find How baby works; 'cause babe won't mind If Mary Ann should pick her up And drop her then for Donald Duck.

At least — Her dollies never used to care If she'd drop them for Teddy Bear And Mom and Daddy never said "Be careful, dear, you'll bump her head."

But maybe it's 'cause baby cries If you bump her head or touch her eyes, So Mary Ann decides to sing, "Mmmmm, mmmmm, Mom smiles. That's just the thing."

And so she sings 'bout Lil' Bo Peep While baby nicely goes to sleep And Mary's proud — she's shown her Dad, That she can make her Mommy glad.

FARM DINNER

Let's have an old-time dinner! Let's taste again the charm— The simple homelike goodness— Of food upon the farm!

Let's have some salt pork frying! Let's warm the home-made beans! Let's make some thick milk gravy! Let's cook a mess of greens!

Apple sauce in side dishes, "Gems" if we're short of bread, We'll set upon a cover Of checkered white and red!

Let's light a lamp and place it Right on the table where In their familiar china We see the plain farm fare.

Let's have our mother busting Out of the buttry door, Bearing a plate of cookies, Urging us: "Do eat more!"

Let's have an old-time dinner! Let's turn our dreaming gaze Back to the humble farmhouse— Shrine of our childhood days! (Copyright, 1937)

THE EXPEDITION TO BALANCE THE BUDGET

Personal Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
Noted Physician and Author

THOUSAND NUTS ON A DESERT ISLAND

The other day I offered to wager twenty-five to one in each of a thousand cases that a thousand persons subject to habitual or chronic constipation and addicted to some special diet, enema or aperient medicine, will no longer require such "aid" to bowel action after three months of absolute deprivation of access to such "aids."

No one has offered to accept the wager. I thought it would be fairly safe to make such a wager to offer to do so. Not that I yearn to see a lot of wretched mortals slowly perishing with auto-intoxication or any such frightful, if wholly imaginary, fate. But I know the great wise are public in Yankee-land and I am confident I could get sufficient capital to underwrite the project if a few adventurers should volunteer to serve as the guinea pigs for the experiment.

The conditions would not be so frightful as the thought of a thousand nuts on a desert island might suggest. Remember, they are to have everything they could have in their ordinary environment except their favorite physic. From subjective and objective experience I know that even the average badly educated layman can stand the strain of five days of worry or anxiety—that is the length of time usually required for readjustment of the normal rhythm after interference has ceased—and we'd cancel the bets on the few who would go quite batty under the strain.

We must remember that the thousand guinea pigs would necessarily be a bit weak in the head in order to qualify for the trip to the island, for after all a person of sound mind can hardly permit himself to become addicted to physic. No getting around the fact that the lower you go in the scale of intelligence the more fixated the notion that the bowels need constant watching and daily "regulation."

Booklet No. 25 in the Little Lessons series, "The Constipation Habit," which sets you back ten cents and a stamped envelope bearing your address suggests several substitutes for physic, things which favor natural or normal functioning of the bowel and help to support the addict thru the first five days after he swears off physic. Perhaps the most important thing of the kind is an optimal or more than sufficient daily intake of vitamins. This is rather beneficial for any one who subsists on the ordinary diet of more or less refined food; it is particularly helpful for those who are subject to constipation or digestive weakness. So let's try to hedge on my bet by advising the thousand guinea pigs to start taking generous rations of vitamins B, G and D a few weeks before leaving for the island and to continue taking plenty of B, D and G while doing their stretch. This, I think, would give them the intestinal vigor they need to overcome their weakness.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Canning
You imply that factory canned tomato is superior to home canned tomato or tomato juice. (F. M. A.)

Answer—Only in vitamin C. Commercial canning, (vacuum process) preserves more of the vitamin C of fresh fruit or vegetable or juice than does home canning, because oxidation destroys vitamin C. This is important only because tomato juice is a source of vitamin C in infant feeding, or in northern regions where canned tomato or tomato juice may be the most economical available source of vitamin C for infants, children and adults in the winter. Vitamin C necessary to prevent scurvy.

Hacking Cough
What are the signs of tuberculosis? I have a dry cough and shooting pains? (L. M.)

Answer—There are no signs you can depend on. The only way to find out what ails you is to be examined, if necessarily repeatedly, by a physician. That is the best way to manage cough even if you have no suspicion of tuberculosis.

Corn
One big corn on ball of foot. Would your famous corn cure be good? (Mrs. F. A. R.)

Answer—No harm to try it. Pain, corn, callus or wart once daily with solution of 20 grains of salicylic acid in one-half ounce of flexible collodion.

Your Birthday

"SCORPIO"

If October 24 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m., and from 8:30 to 10:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:30 to 10:30 a. m., from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m., and from 10:30 p. m. until midnight.

Without enthusiasm it will be difficult to accomplish anything in the way of putting over a suggestion or idea this day. Many a conversation will fall flat due to a lack of animation, so it will be well for you to try to be vivacious. It will pay to speak plainly if it becomes a question of debunking some fallacy. You may feel like turning up your nose at some person or thing that irks your fastidiousness, but it might be a good judgment to suppress any such inclination. Disdain will be the cause of enmity, and on this day you cannot afford to make enemies. Love will be an influencing factor in your affairs, so try to be appreciative if you see a manifestation of it. Married and engaged couples, and those who are in love, must be careful what means they use, to gain a desired end this day.

If a woman and October 24 is your birthday, you should reason well, and have little trouble in finding a logical answer to any intellectual question. You may have a life filled with delightful adventures and triumphs. Inherently honest, thoroughly practical, and having a delightful personality, you will overcome difficulties and your hopes realized. Be careful, however, that ambition does not make you try to accomplish things too quickly or tempt you to over-extrude. As a newspaper reporter, author, entertainer, singer, musician or teacher, you ought to do well financially. You may be admirably adapted to married life, and find it a source of continuous happiness.

The child born on October 24 is apt to be of an athletic type, and water may have a strong attraction for this youngster. In its early youth its prowess in some sport may win both popularity and gratifying publicity.

If a man it might require both time and courage for you to overcome difficulties, but in the long run you may reach the top rung of the ladder of success, with flying colors. As a politician, builder, promoter, engineer, writer, educator, clergyman, actor or lawyer, you possibly will attract much favorable attention.

Seen And Heard In New York

By GEORGE TUCKER

New York—In the Times Square area are two vast news stands where are sold newspapers from every important city in the world. These include all principal American cities and the European capitals, with special emphasis being placed on English language papers from Shanghai and other Orient ports.

Now being a cosmopolitan center, composed of people from every city, state, and nation in the world, it is an assured fact that if you stand near these stands for any length of time you will see a cross-section of the world pass in review.

Less publicized but equally true is the fact that plainclothes men and detectives keep a watchful eye on these stands. They scrutinize closely anyone purchasing a paper there, and their logic is simple. Criminals frequently give way to impulse or curiosity to see how much the "local" press is making over their activities. A fugitive, say, from Minneapolis is likely to ask for his hometown paper, and when he does a copper usually is ready to slip the irons on him.

Then again, spies are sometimes detected in this way. There is one case on record where a rather harmless looking fellow was in the habit of buying a large number of papers every second Monday at one of these stands. Finally it became noted that he purchased newspapers only—that is, he bought Savannah, Miami, New Orleans, Galveston, San Diego, San Francisco, and Seattle papers. This, in effect, drew a "ring" around the United States.

Before making a move the authorities purchased these papers themselves and, in time, succeeded in breaking down a code in the classified advertisements. The purchaser was a spy and was receiving certain information in this way twice a month. This was shortly after the war, and so the fellow was as I recall, deported. Had he been captured during the war he would have been shot.

Another favorite ambush for detectives is the nightclubs. "Push" late-hour places, aware that fugitives, with a lot of loose "scratch," break out now and then on spending sprees. More than one important capture has been made in the dimly lit glow of a nightclub.

I remember meeting a detective one night in a pre-repeal place near 52nd street.

"I've been here every night for two weeks," he said. "We're after a safe-cracker from Boston. He's a good-time guy and can't keep out of the gay spots for long. He'll come in one of these nights and when he does I'll put the irons on him."

They got him two nights later, during a private champagne supper, with one of his sweeties.

Richard Manney, the theatrical representative, is a collector of printed dramas. In his office at 120 West 42nd street are more than 100 copies of plays. "For quick reference work," he says. His apartment is stacked to the ceiling with books, all on the theatre.

A Bystander In Washington

By PRESTON GROVER

This is another article in which Preston Grover, Washington columnist and author of New York municipal campaign as an important segment in the national political picture.

NEW YORK CITY—Every vote that Mayor La Guardia gets Nov. 2 in his race for reelection will give him a sly dig in the ribs. It will remind him how craftily he was maneuvered into heading a Republican slate he did not want to head.

La Guardia himself is a smart enough politician and usually he pulls only his own chestnuts out of the fire. But two alert Republican leaders, one old, one new, now are having the mayor help pull their chestnuts out of the fire. This is the story, in brief.

In 1933 Mayor La Guardia rode into the mayoralty on the crest of the Seabury reform wave still rumbling along the shore after shuffling Mayor Jimmy Walker out of office. La Guardia ran on the fusion ticket, but was the nominee also of the Republicans, who were glad enough to get him. They were punch-drunk from the Roosevelt onslaught of the previous November. La Guardia and his reform backers wrote their own ticket and the Republicans had to like it, although it contained scarcely a Republican name.

Now a Republican mayor normally could be expected to help out the Republican organization by a liberal appointment of patronage. But mightily little did La Guardia do for the Republicans, who was running his own show.

In The Same Boat

Their principal satisfaction was in knowing that the Democratic organization, which had seen thousands of its voters swarm to La Guardia, also was getting mighty little help from the new mayor.

Noting this situation, Kenneth Simpson, New York county chairman (his domain is Manhattan), counseled with his Republican mentor, Charles D. Hilles, Republican national committeeman. They knew La Guardia needed the Republican nomination. They expected also that, like in 1933, he would want the Republicans to accept his own slate.

For a time Simpson and other Republican leaders, who are not fond of La Guardia, thought of running out on him. But that meant a likely Democratic victory. And Republicans, while politically starving, themselves, had a high purpose in further starving Democrats as they had been starved under La Guardia. The purpose was to come as nearly as possible to starving the Democratic city organizations to death and at the same time to give Republicans a victory.

G. O. P. Rides

So instead of waiting for La Guardia to name the Republican slate, Simpson abruptly came out one day with a Republican slate, all pledged to La Guardia, if he should accept the Republican organization's nomination. The slate was made up of Republicans and independents who had supported La Guardia so loyally that the mayor could not well repudiate them. And yet it was political agony for him to lend his own immense popularity to rejuvenation of the Republican party organization.

For three weeks he refused comment on his plight, but it is related that every time the name of Simpson was mentioned he beetled his brows as only La Guardia can. Then he capitulated. And the mayor could not but win victory in the primary was a Republican-named ticket, and the same ticket hoped to ride with him into office Nov. 2.

Simpson, a red-haired lawyer of about 45 who goes in for modern art and solid glass tables, is frank enough as to part of his purpose at least. He wants to win power in the city organization. Further, he thinks the Republican party can rejuvenate itself, best by a series of local victories, and by a national Hoover-sponsored convention to pronounce "high-sounding ideals." (Simpson's words.)

Just what Simpson expects to do with his victory when he gets it is much in doubt. Some day he may try to become New York's national committeeman, succeeding Hilles, who has resigned. Simpson doesn't say.

Named for another term were Marshall Cousins, Madison, formerly of Eau Claire, president; L. M. Hanks, Madison, treasurer, and the following vice presidents: Emil Bensch, Howard Greene and Carl M. Morris, all of Milwaukee; A. H. Sanford, La Crosse and E. B. Steensland, Madison.

R. K. Richardson, Beloit, was chosen vice president to succeed the late J. H. A. Lacher, Waukesha. Dr. Felix Forbeck, Milwaukee and M. C. Crandall, Baraboo, were named new curators.

Milk Industry on Display at Show

New Orleans—(U)—The milk industry is primping up like a debutante getting ready for her first party.

Colorful paper bottles are beginning to replace the old-style glass ones. The milkman has a dashing well-cut uniform and dairy machinery looks like futuristic contraptions the comic strip artists draw for a trip to the moon.

All this, and much more, is on display at the vast Dairy Industries exposition now open here. Almost 200 companies have agreed to display 600,000 worth of everything the business needs. The paper bottle is definitely taking hold, particularly for retail sale from stores. Customers like them because they don't have to make a deposit for a bottle.

Ritz Brothers in New Musical Show

'Life Begins in College' to Be Shown at Appleton Theater

Bigger and badder, madder and merrier, wilder and wackier than in "Sing, Baby, Sing," "On the Avenue" and "You Can't Have Everything," those three comedy-mad Ritz Brothers are starred for the first time in "Life Begins in College," Twentieth Century-Fox musical hit featuring Joan Davis, Tony Martin and Gloria Stuart and a note worthy cast, which will be shown soon at the Appleton theater.

A hilarious, tuneswept jamboree, "Life Begins in College," contains all the essential elements for a gay, entertaining hit—giddy gags, gorgeous girls and frenzied fun. The glo-roarious cast also includes Fred Stone, Nat Pendleton, Ed Thorgeron, Dick Baldwin, Joan Marsh, Dixie Dunbar, Ted Prouty, Maurice Cass, Marjorie Weaver and J. C. Nugent.

The screen play, written by Karl Tunberg and Don Ettlinger from stories by Darrell Ware, moves with zest and speed from one riotous situation to another, with the three Ritz circus unloading the niftiest comedy gags of their careers.

With them is Joan Davis, pretty red-headed comedienne, who attains new heights of hilarity as a love-struck girl on a heart-hunt for an Indian, of all things.

The unassuming Indian, with only $10,000 a day to spend, is snubbed by all the fraternity brothers until the Ritz Brothers take him in and then the fun begins in a riotous frolic of mirth and merriment.

Surrounding the plot are dazzling ensembles with hundreds of gorgeous girls dancing to the swaying tunes of Pollack and Mitchell.

From start to finish, "Life Begins in College" is jammed with laughs that leave one hysterical with joy.

The Pollack and Mitchell hit tunes include "Why Talk About Love?" "Big Chief Swing It," "Our Rhumba Goes Collegiate," "Our Team On the Sweet Path" and "Fare Lombar," a musical comedy composed by Charles Tobias, Al Lewis and Murray Mencher is also featured.

Dick Powell, Waring In Current Rio Show

"Varsity Show," a musical comedy along altogether new lines, and possessed of a sparkling cast, met with an enthusiastic reception at the Rio Theatre yesterday, where it started a 5 day showing. A star individual—Dick Powell—and a star organization—Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians—are the top-liners in this melodious, laughable, fast-paced tale of college life as the movie-makers see it—and as, doubtless, all college boys and girls wish it were.

It is the tale of how the undergraduates of a little fresh-water educational institution try to put on a show under the supervision of a dignified and gloomy professor, only to realize that he's ruining it with his highbrow notions.

Then they go to the city and dig up Dick Powell, a graduate, who by now is a successful Broadway producer, and induce him to come back to school and supervise a real show.

Dick and his partner—none other than the goofy Ted Healy—take over the job. And after many a battle between the modern and old-fogy elements in the school, a show is put on—and what a show!

"Varsity Show" is a refreshing relief in its story, from the well-worn "back-stage" routine into which many musical comedies have been kept. There is an air of briskness and youth and gaiety to it rarely found in movie-musicals.

Rosemary Lane, lovely to look at, is Dick Powell's romantic feminine interest, while her sister Priscilla is one of the most original and adept dancers to be seen upon the screen in recent years.

The added feature on this same program is "Trapped by the G-Men," featuring Jack Holt.

Drama of Big Timber Country on at Elite

With a star-studded cast headed by Jack Holt, Grace Bradley, Raymond Hatton and Ruth Donnelly, "Roaring Timber," Columbia's spectacular action drama of the big timber country, is showing at the Elite Theatre today and Sunday.

It is replete with good performance, moves at a thrilling pace, and thanks to the hilarious antics of Hatton and Miss Donnelly, who are two of Hollywood's ablest comedians, wins a resounding volume of laughs.

Holt cast as a logging boss, the hardest-driving superintendent in the whole north woods, who faces the job of getting out an enormous volume of timber in record time in order to fulfill a contract.

Suddenly his boss dies. Holt, as his new employer is the owner of the logging camp, arrives from the east. A society dame, played by a pretty Grace Bradley, who comes under the influence of an unscrupulous company official who blocks Holt's efforts.

In addition, Holt resents working for a woman. Complications ensue. A strike follows, with Holt and the girl is compelled to return to work.

Why Holt does this, and how he gets the climax toward which the whole picture proves great scenes. Vivid spectacle highlights the whole: a dam breaks, with thousands of logs rushing to sea; there a forest fire sequence, with Holt and his workmen dynamiting whole trees to halt the blaze!

Birds Follow Definite Schedule of Migration

BY CLARA HUSSONG

Regardless of weather conditions, song birds depart for the south at a given time each fall. Some leave their northern homes as early as July and other species linger as late as the first week in November.

Weather conditions have little to do with the time of starting their annual flights, although a bad weather may delay them at times. They have made their start.

This, however, is not true of such water birds as ducks, geese and swans, and such game birds as the quail. The great blue heron, also sometimes lingers here until late in October if mild weather makes it possible for him to find food.

Far to the north the water birds begin their migration as soon as the waters on which they rest and feed begin to freeze. They fly south until they come to open water and abundant food. If the cold wave, which prompted them to start their flight, follows at their heels, they hurry onward again. Some autumn a steadily increasing cold drives them southward so quickly that they pass through almost before we become aware of it.

Although flocks of wild geese and ducks have been reported flying south since the beginning of October, up to the time I am writing this, they have been few in number. As soon as a cold snap sweeps the counties a hundred miles or so to the north where many are now resting, we can expect to see flock after flock passing or visiting the waters in our localities. If they find mild weather here, they will stop for a time.

Everyone is familiar with the V-shaped formation in which geese fly. Ducks and swans fly in the same way, a fact which may be familiar to those of you who have always lived near large bodies of water. Even in inland places, however, migrating geese are a common sight. They do not always follow the water courses, forsaking them for grain fields many miles from large bodies of water. During their migratory flight they stop for days in these fields picking up scattered seeds among the stubbles.

Geese Are Familiar At close range flying squadrons of geese, ducks and swans can easily be told apart. Swans are the largest, snow white in color, with long necks and a great wing spread. When flying they often utter their trumpet call and if you know the call you can recognize the birds even when they fly so high no distinguishable color can be noted. In spite of their being named "whistling swans," their call is a shout, not a whistle.

The Canadian goose is our most familiar migrant. A few remain in the state during the summer but most of them nest farther north. This bird can be recognized by its long black "stocking-neck," its grayish-brown body and lighter breast.

Before I came to live in this part of the state I had few opportunities to study wild ducks. The first few flocks I saw I mistook for wild geese because they flew in the V-shaped formation and they were too far for me to recognize them as ducks by their build.

"How can you tell flying ducks from geese when they fly?" I asked of my companion who had corrected me.

"That's easy," he said. "Ducks fly like ducks, and geese fly like geese."

This should have been illuminating, I suppose, but it wasn't. The domesticated ducks and geese I had seen on farms had never flown any great distance so I hadn't learned their habits of flight. I found nothing in books of any help and I was forced to learn by simple observation. Now, after four years of watching them, I've decided that you can tell flying ducks from geese by their shorter necks, by their habit of holding the wings in a sort of drooping position and by their more rapid wing-beat. I may be wrong in this last observation and if so I shall be glad to have someone correct me. Also, if you know any more ways in which you can tell ducks from geese when they're mere specks in the blue, send the information along.

Birds Are Moving

Blue herons and cranes are often confused when seen in flight. Herons are common in the marshes near water all over the state. If you live in places where there are birds recede through the summer you must have noticed how like an airplane the silhouette of a heron appears against the sky. Their necks are drawn in, their wings are broad and their long legs trail behind them. Cranes, on the other hand, fly with their long necks outstretched.

A few migrating song birds may still be seen. The fox sparrow, a bright brown sparrow with a speckled breast, should be arriving from the north at this time. Look for this bird in parks or at the edges of woods. You will find him energetically scratching for weed seeds among the fallen leaves.

Bette Davis Plays in 'That Certain Woman'

"That Certain Woman," starring Bette Davis, will open at the Appleton theatre Sunday.

Mary Donnell (Bette Davis) and her friend Amy (Mary Phillips) are placed in the hands of the dead gangster, who was Mary's husband. She, in the four years since the Valentine day massacre in which he was killed, has given up her former associations.

As she places her flower memorial on the grave, a flashlight bulb goes off, held in the hands of a "Whitaker," a reporter (Hugh O'Connell), doing a series on the "gangsters and their molls of yesterday." The reporter has his story and wants Mary to sign it with her name for a thousand dollars.

She refuses and goes back to her office, where she is employed as secretary and assistant to Lloyd Rogers (Ian Hunter), a brilliant attorney. Whitaker pursues her to the office and threatens exposure. Rogers then reveals that he has known all the time about the brave fight Mary has put up to bury her past.

'Fly-Away Baby' to Be Shown at Elite

Glenda Farrell Appears Again as Girl Newspaper Reporter

With Glenda Farrell appearing once again as Torchy Blane, the star girl newspaper reporter, and Barton MacLane as Lieutenant Steve McBride, her cop sweetheart, Warner Bros. offer "Fly-Away Baby," a fast-stepping melodrama, on the screen of the Elite Theatre on Monday and Tuesday, Bargain Days.

This is the second of the Torchy series, the first having been "Smart Blonde," which is certainly a fitting title where Miss Farrell is concerned.

"Fly-Away Baby" is based upon the recent race around the world in which two men reporters and one girl were the contestants. Miss Dorothy Kilgallen of the King Feature Service was the girl, and it was she who wrote the story that now comes to us in movie form.

But it isn't simply the story of the world-looping race. It begins with a murder mystery, and cop-Torchy herself fly oceans and mountains and deserts.

Besides the two stars, the cast includes such notables as Marcia Ralston, Tom Kennedy, Raymond Hatton, Gordon Oliver, Joseph King, Harry Davenport and others.

Miriam makes a happy return to the sphere of rafter-rocking comedy in this grandly goofy story of a destitute girl architect who chased a wealthy but handsome young lightward clear across the continent to get him to finance his nutty invention of a model village—and wound up with his name on the dotted line of both the contract and a marriage license.

Charles Winnager, Erik Rhodes, Ella Logan, Leona Maricle and Broderick Crawford are featured.

New Show Depicts Life of Emile Zola

Paul Muni Heads Cast of Production to be Shown at Rio

One of the greatest claims to fame possessed by the Republic of France is that it was the birthplace and the homeland of Emile Zola, the immortal novelist. And now, for the first time, Zola reaches the films. With Paul Muni in the name part, "The Life of Emile Zola," comes to the Rio theatre soon.

There is a strong temptation, of course, to compare this epic with the one that gained for Muni, last year, the Motion Picture Academy's award for the best performance by an actor in 1936—"The Story of Louis Pasteur."

There's the same star, the same director (William Dieterle) and the same lavish type of picture-making. Possibly this may mean another gold statuette for Paul from the Academy. At all events, "The Life of Emile Zola" is a truly great picture and many observers believe it to be even greater than "Pasteur."

Artist Tells Club How to Go Around World on Penny

Neenah — Her voice, her brush; her words, her paints; her audience, her canvas, Mrs. Anita Willets-Burnham, Chicago Art Institute instructor, in swift, bold strokes, painted an amusing and clever picture of traveling round the world on a penny when she spoke before Menasha Economic club members and their guests. Menasha public school teachers and board members, Friday afternoon in the Twin City Y. W. C. A.

Of the two European tours with a paintbox, a family of six, a trunk on wheels because "it saved tipping," a big bag for "forgotten things," a black cape that "fits the whole family and what's under it is nobody's business," Mrs. Willets-Burnham told her audience, saying "we traveled third class because there was no fourth class but we have a first class time. We got plenty of atmosphere. Why go if there is no atmosphere?"

"We need the contrast of foreign shores to appreciate our own," Mrs. Willets-Burnham said as she told of her preliminary saving to get enough money to make the "big jumps across the Atlantic. No matter what you do in this world, there is always someone who will think you're crazy but I think traveling as we did is the most delightful way to 'get educated'."

In an individual and personal manner, she told of the trip across in the French boat "where canary birds' fare was $10, babies $11 and dogs $15," of their arrival in London, their trips through France, Algiers, Naples, Rome where "every stone is a story, Florence with its 'miles and miles of painted Madonnas, and Venice with its castles that 'smile into the canals'."

The second trip took the Willets-Burnham family to China, Japan and India. "We averaged one sketch per family per day during our year and half of travel and it cost us $1 per day per person for that period."

From Seattle to Japan on a Japanese boat is an experience in itself, the speaker said as she related interesting and amusing experiences of the boat trip to her appreciative audience.

The old temples and old world beauty of Japan, Korea and China were described by Mrs. Willets-Burnham as she told of many personal experiences and took her audience on a verbal journey through China to Bangkok and Calcutta.

"India is the most colorful place in the world but all racketeers are not in Chicago," said Mrs. Burnham as she continued to paint her verbal pictures of amusing experiences.

Tells of Holy Land

The Holy Land with its "patches of centuries of stone—the walls of Jerusalem," the "mighty walls of Jericho which are only a pile of stones," the journey down the Rhine, Cologne which she "only got a whiff of," Brussels, Spain, Morocco and Paris were discussed briefly but vividly by the speaker.

In relating the experience of the marriage of her daughter to an archeological student on expedition in the Holy land, Mrs. Burnham told the club that the American consul is the only consul in the whole world who cannot marry his own people.

As she showed her sketches and answered questions from members, Mrs. Burnham urged them to travel declaring "it is much easier to do it than you think. The harder thing is to slam the front door of your own home and start out."

Mrs. Norbert Verbrink sang "Ashes of Roses" by Woodman and "I Heard You Singing." She was accompanied at the piano by Miss Ruby Hart. For an encore selection, she sang Schubert's "Serenade."

Miss Edna Robertson who had been instructed, at the last meeting, to draw up a resolution regarding membership in the music department of the club, read the resolution and it was taken at the next meeting. The resolution would not place restrictions on membership of the music department. Should the resolution be adopted, it would become an amendment to article 3, section 1 of the club constitution.

Landskron, Osewalski and Heckrodt starred in the line and Stommet and Duke were the workers in the backfield.

Church to Begin Celebration of 80th Anniversary

Trinity Lutheran Services Sunday Will Be First Event in Observance

Menasha—First services in commemoration of the eightieth anniversary of Trinity Lutheran church, Menasha, will be held Sunday morning at the 8:45 German and the 10 o'clock English services when the Rev. Paul G. Bergmann brings a consecration Sunday message on the subject "If You Are Not There." The Sunday services will begin a round of festivities, both religious and social.

Sunday's service has been designed to rally the spiritual interests of the congregation and extend them on the jubilee. Sunday services Oct. 31. Holy communion services will be held Sunday, Nov. 7.

Members and friends of Trinity Lutheran congregation will greet former pastors at the jubilee Sunday services at which the Rev. Carl Aeppler, Fond du Lac, will conduct the 8:45 German service and the Rev. J. G. Pohlay, Milwaukee, will preach the 10 o'clock English service. The Rev. John Helms, Milwaukee, head of institutional missions, who served Trinity Lutheran church for a quarter of a century, will bring the message at the 7:30 vespers service.

The history of Trinity Lutheran congregation began in the Civil war days. Earliest records show that Lutherans of the vicinity were served by itinerant pastors, even more than 80 years ago, under the direction of the Rev. John Muelhauser of Milwaukee.

Founded in 1857

Records of Menasha Lutherans take concrete form on Oct. 4, 1857, when Trinity Lutheran church was founded under the pastorate of the Rev. Martin Stephan of Oshkosh. At that time Trinity of Menasha and of Neenah formed one church body. Members of the first church council were William F. Bauer, Carl Gerhardt, Fred Loeschner, Henry Wildfang and Henry Menk.

Construction of the first church was begun in the summer of the following year on a tract of wooded land donated by the first governor of Wisconsin, James Jean Doty. The site was located at the present northwest corner of Naynau and Nicolet streets. However, the plan was abandoned and the site sold. Neenah Lutherans organized their own congregation in 1862, while Trinity of Menasha continued to acquire their own building site on Chute street opposite the present church edifice.

Aeppler Called in 1880

Pastors from neighboring congregations served the Trinity pulpits of both churches until 1871. The two churches called the Rev. Otto Hagedorn in 1871 and until 1880 one pastor served both parishes. The Rev. Carl Aeppler was called July 13, 1880, and became the first local pastor.

From the time that Lutheran pastors first started to serve the people of this region over 80 years ago, Trinity Lutheran has grown steadily. By 1921 the membership of the congregation consisted of 500 baptized members and 426 communicants.

The Rev. Mr. Aeppler served until 1888. The Reverend John Helms was called and served the parish for 25 years. The Rev. J. G. Pohlay went into office in 1923 and served until the last Sunday in September, 1936, when he was succeeded by the Rev. Paul G. Bergmann, the present pastor.

BY HULBERT FOOTNER

SYNOPSIS: When flashy Prescott Fanning abducts Janet from Baltimore on his yacht, she gets word to Neill, a young federal agent who loves her. Dashing to Absalom's Harbor, he boards the yacht and finds, in a locked cabin, Fanning shot dead and Janet in a faint, a gun beside her. Neill hides her nearby in a disguised liner, then joins Mark Boninger, keen local investigator, to keep tabs on developments. Returning from a trip to the ship, Neill is seized and bound by a husky opponent who wants to know where Fanning's "stuff" is. Neill sends him on a wild chase and is struggling to free himself when queer little Eyster comes, cuts him loose.

Chapter 23
SPY IN ROOM 18

"WALK along in the edge of the water so we can't be followed," Neill said.

After splashing through the shallow water for a hundred yards or so, they made a wide detour around the course that Neill's assailant had taken across the field and back.

"How did you do me?" said Eyster.

"I was listening to you moving around in your room to-night..."

"Listening, where?"

"My room is number 15 next door to yours. I heard you come out and go down the back stairs and I followed."

"Why?"

"Well, it's just my way," said Eyster with his crazy grin. "I like to know what folks are up to."

"Go on," said Neill grimly.

"I soon found out I couldn't follow you without being caught at it. In the upper part of the village there wasn't a person moving. So I gave it up and came back to the hotel to wait for you. I waited and waited and you didn't come, so I went out again to look for you. It was only by accident that I found your tracks."

"How come?"

"Well, I had gone through the village when I heard the cop coming on his motorcycle and I went over the fence into the field alongside. I didn't want to be questioned. In that field I found your tracks where you had crossed and come back again."

"How did you know they were my tracks?"

"I have followed you before," said Eyster giggling. "There was another set of tracks coming back, a hell of a big foot. Somebody had followed you."

"How do you know he had followed me?"

"Because in places his track pressed yours out."

"Pretty good. Go on."

"Well, the coming-back tracks brought me to a place where there had been a struggle. I picked up a flashlight there."

"It's mine," said Neill.

"Beyond that place I couldn't find your tracks; only the big man's. He went over the fence. I couldn't figure out what he had done with you. I looked around, and across the road I found where he had gone across another field and come back again. So I followed his tracks and came to the old ship and looked in her. Was I surprised?"

Neill's feelings were mixed upon hearing this. If the story was true, he owed Eyster a debt that could never be repaid. But was it true? The man had such a furtive, mysterious air that Neill couldn't trust him. Was it not possible that Eyster and the other were working together? The big man had changed his purpose perhaps, and sent Eyster back to free Neill.

"Do you know who attacked me?" asked Neill grimly.

"No. Do you?"

Neill was pretty sure then that he was lying.

"Well, I certainly am obliged to you for coming to my help," Eyster laughed in his queer, "your tracks."

'So Great a Man' Describes Height of Napoleon's Career

By Jean Wiley Thickens

"SO GREAT A MAN" By David Pilgrim.

It is said that more than ten thousand books have been written around the dynamic figure of Napoleon Bonaparte—fiction, history, drama and biography, and still new material comes to light to inspire other works about this nineteenth century Julius Caesar. The most recent one "So Great a Man" by David Pilgrim covers that period in Napoleon's life when he was still balancing precariously at the apex of his career with sycophantic courtiers striving to undermine his lofty position and topple him to earth.

The most subtle, clever and dangerous of these unfaithful public servants was the famous Talleyrand, who was minister of foreign relations for Napoleon. Though his treason and perfidy were exposed to Napoleon repeatedly the emperor scorned to imprison or guillotine him, recognizing Talleyrand's ability and believing that, in spite of his treason, his talents would serve France better at court than in a prison cell.

The product of a princely house, wealthy and cultivated, Talleyrand in this book shares honors with Napoleon as a figure of romance. In spite of his fragile almost feminine physique, his marked limp and his caustic tongue, the beautiful women of the emperor's court fluttered around him like moths about a flame. Talleyrand's wife (who had been his mistress for many years) was not his equal in either brains or breeding. She was so grateful for having raised her to her position of social eminence that she seldom dared protest his many amours.

Covers 10 Months The present novel covers just 10 months of Napoleon's career, from March, 1808 till January, 1809. It was at that period when he had decided to suppress the Bourbon dynasty in Spain and place his incompetent brother Joseph on the Spanish throne. As his minister Talleyrand had warned him, that headstrong policy was the instrument of his downfall.

The author states that "all the principal and most of the minor characters in the book are historical" and Pilgrim has endeavored very hard to take no liberties with historical facts. Even much of the conversation is authentic and this lends an atmosphere of reality to the plot. Talleyrand, Fouché, the minister of police, and the Duchess Josephine have all been presented in as authentic a fashion as available material allows. At this period of history Josephine has by her infidelities and her extravagances finally alienated the love of her royal spouse. When it is too late she has discovered that the game was not worth the candle. But by that time Napoleon has completely fallen out of love with his wife and is deeply enamored in the toils of his youthful mistress, the Duchess Marie Walske called by the court "the Polish rose." Marie has been sent to France to win the emperor's love and thereby gain national autonomy for Poland. This young

Duchess is a delightful creature, wise, tender, and lovable. She becomes completely wrapped up in her lover's career, even to the exclusion of her beloved Poland. Had Napoleon accepted the advice of his beautiful young mistress and refrained from some of his most extravagant plans to make himself world dictator, the pages of history would undoubtedly read differently today. But mad ambition drove the emperor even when he realized that he had overstepped himself and was doomed to eventual defeat and dethronement. He himself once remarked to Marie: "great men are meteors; they burn themselves out to light the world."

Though the book is precise in the historical correctness this does not detract from its intense interest as a novel. If the result of this historical authenticity has an air of impossible romance at times, one has only to study meticulously the character of Napoleon in his own and varying moods, to realize its verity. "So Great a Man" is an extraordinarily fine historical document as well as a very tender love story.

noiseless fashion. "Comes hard, don't it, to be beholden to me?" Neill said nothing.

The village was asleep when they returned. They met nobody.

News Of The Girl

Neill was up at six, sore in every joint. He anxiously consulted the mirror. His face was not as badly marked as he feared, for the man's blows had mostly fallen on bony places. But there was an ugly bruise on one cheek.

When he opened his door to go out he was aware that a door down the corridor moved a little and that an eye was applied to the crack. So the spy was still on the job. The number of the room was 18. Neill fiddled with his lock while he debated whether to force the door open and have a look at the man. He decided against it. On Janet's account he dared not risk a showdown.

He found Bonninger already busy with his ham and eggs in the dining room. He showed a calm front that filled Neill with envy. This case couldn't get under his skin. Neill himself was as tense as a hunted animal.

"Sit down," said Bonninger. His stern face relaxed in a smile. Evidently he had decided to like Neill. It increased the danger.

"Thanks," Neill placed himself so that he could watch the bottom of the stairs. Nobody came down while he sat there. But there was the back stairway.

"Good God!" said Bonninger when he got a look in his face. "What have you been up against?" Neill seized on the first lie that offered itself. He recollected a rowdy resort. "I dropped into Kinney's for a drink last night and got into a little mix-up."

Bonninger frowned. "This is a local option county. Kinney has no right to sell hard liquor. I'll speak to the sergeant."

"Don't do it," said Neill quickly. "You'll only get me in wrong with the bunch. Let's stick to the big case."

Bonninger shrugged. "I've been on the telephone half the night. They've given me a private wire into Longeope's office."

"Any news of the girl?" "Plenty."

Neill looked up startled. "No reliable news," said Bonninger. "I mean she's been reported from all over the state. From Winchester across the bay; from Lower Blenheim 30 miles up the river; from Baltimore and even from as far west as Frederick."

"She must be pretty spry." "Sure, if it was all true, but such reports always spring up in a sensational case. They are started by people trying to horn in on it. The worst of it is, they've all got to be run down. The state police are doing it."

Neill bent on diverting his mind from the facts, said: "She must have got clear of this vicinity or else she's dead."

"Nothing in it," said Bonninger coolly. "In my opinion she's very much alive, and not a thousand miles away from here, either."

Neill looked at him, but the calm face gave nothing away.

"What was the report from Silchester?" Neill asked.

"A fisherman in the Cherry river says that he saw a stiff rowing in from the bay at 6 o'clock on Wednesday with a woman sitting in the stern wearing a black wrap of some kind and a man rowing."

Neill helped the false clue along as well as he could. "The mouth of the Cherry river is 25 miles from here. That would make it about right if there was a strong pair of arms at the oars."

Bonninger was not impressed. "Sure, but if the fisherman wanted to lie he could have worked that out from what he read in the newspapers yesterday."

Dope On Fanning

"Are you going to investigate?" "Why should I? My job is here. . .

I've got a good bit of dope on Fanning since I saw you."

"What's that?" "I sent a photograph, measurements and fingerprints up to New York, and they have found him in their rogues' gallery. His right name is Lester Patchin, but he has used a string of aliases. Gilt-edge swindler; get-rich-quick artist; and so on. Has served a term in Massachusetts lately, police said, he has dropped out of sight."

"What was he doing in Baltimore?" "That I can't tell you yet."

"Well, he wasn't there for his health."

"I believe you."

"What's the program for today?" "I'm going out to the yacht to look things over."

"Want me to come along?" suggested Neill offhandedly. "Two pair of eyes are better than one."

"Sure, glad to have you!" "I suppose you haven't identified the girl yet?"

"Not a clue," said Bonninger. "That's the biggest mystery of all."

Neill felt more like breakfast. When they had finished, Bonninger went away to the store to receive a report. Wickes was in the hotel office counting the previous day's takings, and Neill lingered under pretense of lighting his pipe.

"Who you got in room 18?" he asked.

"Wickes glanced at the register. 'Guy called Ira Buckless took that room Tuesday night. I put in a couple of other guys last night. Don't know their names.'

"What like guy is this Buckless?" "Deed, I couldn't tell you, mister. I got such a crowd."

Neill went on to the store porch to wait for Bonninger. Horace Kettering came along with a cheerful greeting.

"Morning Wheatley!" "Morning, Mr. Kettering."

"Look, Wheatley, my son was called up to town last night. He's sickened up. My wife, I hate to go fishing alone. Won't you join me, today?"

"Thanks a lot," said Neill. "Certainly is kind of you. But this murder case is so interesting I can't tear myself away."

Kettering laughed. "Oh well, if you prefer murder to fishing, I can't get anything for you. Another day, I hope."

Neill makes an exciting discovery on the yacht, tomorrow.

Wheat Quotations Undermined After A Steady Opening

Chicago Prices Drop Abruptly With Disappointing Export Demand

Chicago (U)—A weak security market coupled with a disappointing export demand undermined the wheat market today after a steady opening. Wheat prices abruptly dropped a cent a bushel about an hour before the close and held near the low point for the remainder of the day.

A brisk show of strength in Liverpool, attributed to a break in international non-intervention negotiations, served only to deter sellers in Chicago. A firm tone at Buenos Aires where wheat growing conditions are becoming more unfavorable also was ignored.

Wheat closed at near the day's lowest prices, and 1-1 cent below Friday's finish. December 97-1/2, May 96-7/8, corn 1-1/2 down, December 57-1/2, May 56-1/2, and oats were 1-1/2 off.

39 Years of Faithful Prescription Service Brings Confidence

"Yes," Belling's Drug Store is an honest-to-goodness drug store, many people testify who have patronized Belling's for many years. While this firm is in every sense of the word completely modern, there is nothing new about the type of service it has been offering during the years of its existence. Belling's is a true prescription drug store where the prescription department is not hidden behind the hardware items. As a result, innumerable families find it the safe, sane, economical practice to take all prescriptions there for attention and to depend upon the Belling line of standard remedies exclusively.

Good advice costs nothing at Belling's, a feature which has made many friends for this store. Another characteristic has been Belling's understanding of the doctor's requirements and its familiarity with what leading physicians prescribe.

Husk O'Hare Will Greet Cinderella Patrons Oct. 31st

"Miss Chicago" to Reward Handsomest Man Attending Dance

Probably no other musical organization among the many excellent ones appearing at Cinderella Ballroom this season has as many unique features as does the orchestra of Husk O'Hare, "the genial gentleman of the air," who comes here on Sunday, October 31, to take charge of the Cinderella's Halloween party.

Husk, voted the "nation's best-dressed orchestra leader" by the American Association of Tailors, presents—in addition to his noted orchestra—lovely Vivian LaGren, auburn-haired beauty, who was Miss Chicago of 1937 and queen of the Chicago charter jubilee. Miss LaGren will entertain in Husk O'Hare's band with her singing, dancing and violin performances.

Probably of greater interest is the fact that the gorgeous Vivian will present a beautiful silver loving cup to the man who, in her opinion, is the handsomest among all the men present at Cinderella this night.

Husk also presents Carol Scott, the 1937 winner of Chicago Jubilee talent contest. Miss Scott, who sings, plays the piano, tap dances, and does impressions and impersonations, is a twinkling entertainer who came out on top in a contest with hundreds of other talented competitors.

Husk, who changes suits three times a day and has a hobby of wearing gay colored cravats, displays 12 wardrobe trunks containing a total of 64 suits, to substantiate the title of being No. 1 in sartorial perfection. In addition he has twenty pairs of shoes, 120 neckties, and gay colored handkerchiefs galore.

For many seasons dapper Mr. O'Hare and his orchestra have toured from coast-to-coast playing America's leading hotels, ballrooms and cafes. He perhaps has a wider acquaintance among dance fans than any other orchestra leader in the nation and just to keep the acquaintance alive he sends his admirers a post card monthly.

Husk has pioneered in the entertainment phase of the dance band business. He has always had a good floor show to offer patrons and sometimes amuses his admirers with his own clever feats of magic. Once he taught the Prince of Wales, now Duke of Windsor, to play drums while the Prince was visiting Chicago and he still likes to tell the story of the democratic manners of the titled drummer.

Besides the Halloween party with the typical Halloween hats and favors on Sunday, October 31, Cinderella ballroom presents Gray Gordon with his famous 15 piece band from the Merry Garden ballroom, Chicago, with scintillating Shirley and Betty Lane, in a fine dancing party tomorrow night, October 24. The Old Time Halloween party is scheduled for Thursday, October 28.

are used and careful handling and storing of drugs, plus periodic checkups, make sure that they contain full strength.

A prompt delivery service, maintained by Belling's has always been one of its outstanding features. What is more, this service is available any time of the day or night. The telephone number is 131.

IT'S 'MUM TIME—BE SURE TO PHONE RIVERSIDE

What with the Lawrence homecoming game scheduled a week from today at Whiting field, and the Wisconsin-Northwestern game on tap at Camp Randall, Madison, the need for chrysanthemums to put the favorite lady in the right mood for football is practically obvious. And it's also practically obvious that the Riverside Greenhouse, famous for all its fall flowers as well as 'mums, is the logical place to order the gorgeous blossoms. You can telephone the greenhouse at 5400 or the downtown shop at 3012.

TELLS OF ACCORDION POPULARITY

One of the most amazing phenomena in musical history is the way the piano accordion has skyrocketed to the top of musical instrument popularity. Mr. C. F. Mitchell, manager of the Van Zeeland Music company said today.

Although the accordion was invented more than 100 years ago," he explained, "it was not until a few years ago that the true musical possibilities of the instrument were properly appreciated by the public.

"As recently as ten years ago the piano accordion was a comparative rarity. Then, with its introduction into dance bands and its success in radio programs, its vogue spread by leaps and bounds. Last year there were more than 100,000 accordions sold in this country. This year the figure will be 50 per cent greater."

Leaders in society, business, aviation and the theater and concert worlds are among those who have taken the accordion to their hearts. The Duke of Windsor, Jascha Heifetz, Nelson Eddy, Frank Hawk, Doris Duke, Ed Wynn and Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire are among the notables who have learned to play for their own amusement.

Murray Golden, accordionist with Shep Field's band, advises the younger people with musical inclinations to take up the accordion. The demand for good accordionists, he says, now exceeds the supply. In almost every band in the country, he points out, the accordionist is the highest paid musician.

Put Car in Shape For Winter; Spend Less at Jahnke's

Reliable Auto Wreckers
Offer Economical Car "Winterizing"

Winterizing your car means considerably more than the filling of your radiator with a reliable antifreeze solution, the changing to lighter oil, and the greasing of your car with winter lubricant. These are services which the August Jahnke Wrecking Company is able to perform daily. However, its main service and that which may be well considered as important for proper automobile winterizing is that of battery, generators, heaters, leakproof radiator servicing, checking, and replacing.

First of all, a properly winterized car must have a good, reliable, strong battery to hold out through the long cold winter pulls. Secondly, an accurate, properly charging generator to keep the battery in first class condition, always properly charged. A leakproof, 100 per cent circulating radiator is another essential which must not be overlooked. A good heater, of course, adds to the driver's and occupants' comfort, making winter driving more enjoyable.

Summed up, proper winterizing of your automobile can mean a considerable outlay of money unless you are aware of the substantial saving which many motorists are making by allowing the August Jahnke Wrecking Company to check over their needs and supply them with good, used or new accessories which are essential for winter driving. You will find that Jahnke's are always well-stocked with good, new or used batteries, generators, radiators, and heaters which can be purchased with considerable saving. In addition, you may wish to take advantage of one of more of the many other services which the Jahnke firm offers and which motorists for years have found to their advantage which include dealing in all types of used and new parts, accessories of every kind, the selling of good used tires at a substantial saving, the rebuilding and repairing of damaged cars by expert repairmen, skilled in this trade, the selling of used cars, a modern towing service, and its daily employee service since Jahnke's are open until 10 p. m. daily, including Sundays.

Too often, the Jahnke firm points out, new parts, for example, purchased by motorists, used in replacements of old and broken parts, are unnecessary purchases because this firm's stock of low cost, quality used parts could, in most cases,
